NAISEKANDMINE

Naisekandmine (wife carrying) is a sport in which male competitors race while carrying a female teammate. The objective is for the male to carry the female through a special obstacle track in the fastest time. The sport was first introduced at Sonkajärvi, Finland.

Over the years several types of carry have been practised: piggyback, fireman's carry (over the shoulder), or Estonian-style (the wife hangs upside-down with her legs around the husband's shoulders, holding onto his waist - as seen below).

H²OMG!

Investigators have descended on Sõrve to look into allegations of sabotage of the main water supply. Management remain tight-lipped about the events that resulted in brown sludge dribbling from the taps. Their only statement so far has been to claim simple 'plumbing problems'. However newly appointed camp leader Kati Koreneff is convinced that it is the work of ex-camp leader Peter Maasepp. "He just won't leave us alone," said Koreneff as she sunbathed outside the leaders hut during her relax time. "It's a conspiracy to make my life difficult, I'm sure of it." When asked about what hard evidence she had to back up her claims, she became preoccupied with sipping her piña colada.

THE WISE WORDS OF PETER MAASEPP

A snippet of conversations with our Laagri Vanem overheard at meal times.

"...that's why this global warming thing is all fluff. What they don't tell you is that more than half of the worlds CO2 emissions come from every time you open a soft drink. See, its all a conspiracy by the soft drink companies. Coca Cola's not going to tell you they're the ones destroying the environment.."

"...Coke should be drunk warm anyway. It was originally made for medicinal purposes for open wounds. They'd get it really hot. Like boiling point. That's how you're supposed to drink it. Like ooouch ouch on your tongue..."

"...see soy milk is bad for you. They don't tell you that. It takes 24 processes to make it. Pasteurised milk only takes 3. But it's all these greenie hippy types...."
