DAY 2: STILL PRETTY HOT

Congratulations! You all survived two nights in a row (especially Tare 2) and have made it here for another day of activities. Yesterday, we kicked off the morning with sports, rock climbing and käsitöö. After a delicious pizza lunch, A group went sailing while B Group played soccer and käsitöö-ing under the watchful eye of Käsitöö grandmaster David. The evening concluded with our opening lõke, which was unfortunately relocated to the pool area due to bad weather, and the traditional run to the Söögisaal for milk and biccies. Although a total fire ban and some light rain kept the flames extinguished, the Juhid still managed to bring the heat with a ~~confusing~~ rousing rendition of Kaera Jaan. Also, I hope everyone is staying fully hydrated and protected from the sun, honestly I'm getting a headache just typing this. Tomas Kuru - Media mogul

Estonian word of the day!

Kuulilennuteetunneliluuk

The hatch a bullet flies out of when exiting a tunnel.

Not only is this word ridiculously long and almost entirely useless, it's also a palindrome. This means it's the same word read forwards as backwards.

If it is 1,800 kilometres to America, 1,200 to Japan, 2,400 kilometres to New Zealand and 1,400 kilometres to Brazil - how far is Morocco?

The answer for yesterdays puzzle was "You will hang me"

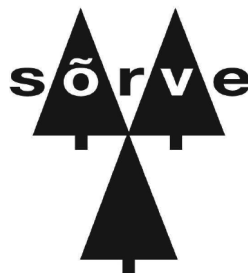

Congrats Caleb Dougherty!

"The improvised ending for Tare Üks' skit was a delight! Four stars!"

Yesterday I went sailing and it was really nice we didn't even capsize and it was the best day ever. Also, if you see one of my minions skulking around taking photos, strike a pose.

Activities

Main Oval B group soccer stars gathered today for a rousing match of jalgpall. B1 and B2 faced off first with B3 and B4 playing a match shortly after. Scores remained tight between B3 and B4 until Remy Semenov just thought "Screw it" and dribbled around the entire opposition team to score a goal and clinch a victory for B3. - TK

Great Moments in Estonian History

Estonia was first Christianised in 1227 when a German crusader group called the Sword Brethren conquered the last remaining pagan stronghold in Saaremaa.
